Writing

This week we began narrative writing. The teachers read The Summer My Father Was Ten by Brisson and Uncle Jed's Barbershop by Margaree King Mitchell. Both books are examples of narratives. The students filled out two Story Reading Guides and began looking at narrative planning for their narrative writing.

D.L.I. Focus for Next Week:

Identifying action, linking, and helping verbs

Conference Forms

Conference forms were sent home. Please return the slip to let your child's teacher know if you will be able to attend or need to reschedule.

Math

Division Review

Students worked on division review this week. At the end of the review sessions, all students will or have taken a quiz on division. To continue to practice the steps of division there are practice problems attached to this week's newsletter.

Social Studies

This Friday was our first Friday of Current Events. Every student is expected to turn in a current event on Fridays with a summary of their chosen news article. Five students per class a week will present their current events. The five presenting students are expected to read their summary (rehearsed—able to look at the audience occasionally), their opinion, be familiar with their articles, read loud, clear, and be able to answer questions regarding the article.

We will move into regions and states soon.
